

The unique volcanic geology gave abundant obsidian to the native people who occupied High Rock Canyon for over 10,000 years.

If left in place, the obsidian artifacts can tell us the story of these ancient lifeways.

Many species find shelter and water in the canyon. Look for bighorn sheep, mule deer, and pronghorn antelope.

Undisturbed nests of golden eagles, great horned owls, and prairie falcons help promote the success of these species into our future.

To protect nesting raptors, the road is closed as posted every spring.

More interpretive material can be found at the Stevens Camp cabin or the Bureau of Land Management, Surprise Field Office:

602 Cressler Street
Cedarville, CA 96104

(530) 279-6101
ca370@blm.gov